Pontius, a Michigan Star.

Michigan Aggles this season and South Dakota last year. Nor is the eastern champion so easy to pick. Yale, Harvard and Princeton are usually considered the triumvirate of the eastern gridiron, but it s not too much to say that every year sees some other elevens with equal claims to press. For instance, Brown a couple of years ago and Penn State, Dartmouth and Carlisle more recently. The person who picked the strongest eastern team would have just as pleasant a task as the man to whom selection for the western title holder was delegated.

Up to date intersectional football games have proved flat failures. The Chicago-Cornell series was abandoned for this reason. Of course the Maroon-Red games drew good crowds and became the "society" games of the year, but they were not football. Chicago would a hundred times rather beat Purdue or Northwestern than Cornell, and Cornell cares more for one Pennsylvania contest than for the entire list of Maroon contests.

Exception might be taken to this assertion by quoting how the Michigan-Pennsylvania games have drawn. This is about the classic of intersectional contests and has become Michigan's big game of the year. Ask any Michigan alumnus or undergraduate how he would like to have Chicago and Minnesota substituted for Pennsylvania and Cornell on the Wolveriue schedule and one will discover how scantily these games have taken root in the affections of the Wolverine rooters.

Some Game.

A Honolulu paper announced a game arranged between the Twentyfifth infantry team, which was recently in Spokane, at Fort Wright, and an all-Chinese team captained by Sam Hop. A Frenchman named La Mere is slated to umpire this Yankee contest between the yellow and the dark. The Hawaiian sporting writer announces the Chinese line-up in the following fashion: Sam Hop, second base; Bum Wing, pitcher; Wun Run, left field; Hop Hed, shortstop; Hit Long, first base; Hi Fly, right field; Low Hit, center field; So Kum, catcher: Sam Bing, third base.

First and foremost, of course, would be the difficulty of getting the faculties of the schools interested, but granting this to be obtainable, how is one to determine tors in modern times. Some writers forward, secured a leg hold and hurled have cast suspicion on the integrity Hackenschmidt to the canvas. Gotch

Of course, last year produced a well defined eastern leader. Harvard won the premier place in the east beyond a question, but could any one pick i similar leader in the west. Wisconsin and Notre Dame had an equal right to the title last season, and to select either one would provoke a riot at the other school. So far as picking one this season—help!

There seldom have been well defined champions either east or west. Of late years there has been no western champion in fact, the honor being claimed by two, three or a half dozen teams. To talk of selecting a title holder when there is no elimination between Chicago, Wisconsin, Minne-sota, Michigan, Nebraska and Notre Dame is ridiculous. These teams are mentioned because they are usually at the top of the heap. Every season, however, sees one or two "outsiders" with claims to present, such as the
